My child...

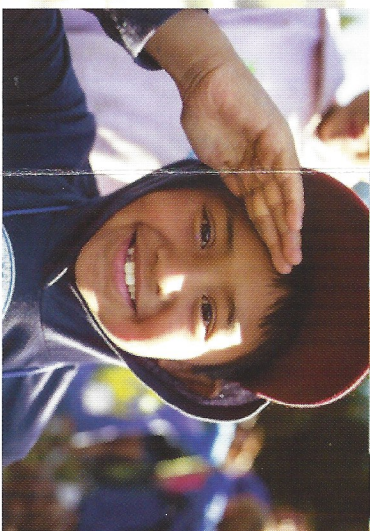

When I was diagnosed with Leukemia, my kids had to grow up really fast. They internalized a lot and didn't share. I think they were trying to be brave for me. (But) when they came home from camp, (it was like) they got their childhood back. They shared their feelings and you could see their inner spark reignited. They have made some life-long friends and have had experiences that will shape the rest of their lives.

Camp Kesem Parent

My son began attending Camp Kesem several years prior to his mother's passing and has attended every year since. It provides him the unique opportunity to relax and have fun, as well as connect with other children his age who have had similar experiences, without the fear of judgment.

My son was able to connect with campers in their experiences and gave him great appreciation for the blessings our family has had since I am 3 years in survival. He was able to open up to us about his experience and how it impacted him.
